Impermanence, Grief, and Loss, Part Two

For Reflection, Journaling, and Small Group Sharing

Where might you have an un-grieved (or not fully grieved) loss?

How might you have managed your vulnerability and avoided grieving?

Some grief is complex: What in this experience of loss is asking for acceptance, inclusion?

Do you want to deepen attention to this domain?

If not, what arises with this question? What might you need to feel drawn to offering your attention?

If so, what might help you (internally and externally in your life) in doing so?