Ajahn Sumedho - Follow Your Heart, Intuition, or Trusting Awareness

These are just words - intellect - dualistic - right and wrong, etc. how we judge intuition - initive awareness - ability to be here and now - just be - without judgement pure conscious awareness - conscious intuition - open to the moment - it is this not saying pleasant or unpleasant following the heart is poetic - doesn't always have a good result quote the prophet reason more on the feeling level Buddhism - feeling is impermanent and not self sankharas are not personal based on conditioning family society religion culture what is right and wrong is tied to the intellect passing judgement this is unacceptable is a judgement acceptable??? in its flavors proliferation - thinking - impermanent judgment is conditioned following the heart is appealing as a poetic image as long as its about a feeling then it is not longer awareness following some judgement - not saying they are wrong but not liberating - obsessed with righteousness - indignit sines of the world emotional reactions to the things we experience but what is aware?

it is consciousness, awareness, mindfulness consciousness is not created out of ingorance out of the senses seeing, hearing, feeling, etc... we are aware of it consciousness is not judging it the thinking mind is the judger all sankharas - dualistic best and worst - phenomena what is aware of that?
Can one phenomena be aware of another phenomena??????????

Not following our emotions to fit in. we are trained. be positive and suppress the negative ones but that is all conditioning what is it that recognized the conditiong sati sampajhana not about right or wrong but the way things are really are all dhamma is not self all conditions are impermanent it is not personal - has no personal entity grasping what is transient out of ignorance that is the cause of suffering grasping the desires desire is a sankhara that be witnessed all the senses are in consciousness everything we know about is phenomena arising and ceasing micro to the macro - electrons to the universe views some intelligent and some biased ignorance suffering is attachment to views either way intuition - following the heart - he is using in terms of awareness if we have an intuition should we be quite or say something that is thinking - should you or shouldn't you? - this is thinking gives a sense of a separate self
