Okay, so this is. Wow. Near the end of the month in February. So that would be. Yeah. What. What would that be? Anyway, it's the 26th, so. So February 26th. So there's a lot of that. All that just to get set to date. I'm pretty much in the moment and not. Not worrying about certain dates until they come up. You know, like, I know my birthday's, you know, a ways away and my daughters andreas and I think I'm going to. I know I'm going to do taxis this weekend, loosely. But I'm pretty spontaneous. And so I just had a little. Not. I didn't. Not meditation, but it was basically, yeah, closing my eyes and just being present in the body. And I had just read this headline from Joe Dispenza, who has a very interesting story and. And.

But a lot about with manifesting, which I'm. You know, I'm generally not down with that, but the way I am okay with manifesting. And this is where my insight today is that. So my practice is really just dealing with things right in front of me and trying to be skillful to the best of my ability and dealing with them in a way where I'm taking action but not overreacting. Now, that's not always the case. I get emotional and I get caught in that. And. And that's where a lot of my dissatisfaction with my own, you know, how with my. Myself comes up or I don't even meet. Where I don't meet my own standards for how I like to behave. You know, I don't really like getting angry. I don't like getting petty. I don't like taking things personal. P. Things personal.

Speaker 1 - 02:44

Although obviously I. We're all affected by things. So this morning. And. And that's an endless story, right? But there are things that I do that the. My habit. Habits and things that men come out of that based on me being in the present. And then. Then there's other things that bring. Come into play, like spending time with my wife, things that we do. Some things, you know, annoy me. And not necessarily when they come, they seem to come up just artificially, not from within me. For instance, eating all the time, you know, eat, eat. When are we gonna eat? What are we gonna eat? What are we gonna eat? When are we gonna eat? You know, that kind of stuff can annoy me, and I love being more spontaneous with it, which is maybe a bachelor attitude.

Speaker 1 - 03:58

And it's not very effective economically and in other ways. But for instance, this morning I Have I, I'm supposed to be eating breakfast and I'm about to do that in a second and that's a good reminder. Just. And this and that is included in. That's included. Planning and doing things is included and it doesn't, it can't all be just spontaneous. But a lot of my life is run by that. And this is. There's a danger in being ruled by your preferences. And I've already run into that because I'm having a difficult time of feeling, I'm feeling justified in getting more sleep, not getting up at five in the morning that you know, the discipline of going to bed early and getting up early. It, I'm finding my body is re.

Speaker 1 - 05:01

Resisting so I've been modifying meaning instead of going for two walks a day, I'm going for one. And I haven't been meditating but you know, I do have the intention of swinging back and finding some kind of balance with that getting up at 5:30 and meditating and you know, a daily, you know, 45 minute meditation instead of an hour. You know, that kind of stuff. But the point of this video, that this recording is not a video, it's just an audio recording is not to, I want to just set the conditions now for the normal things. Back to the conditions.

Speaker 1 - 05:51

I'm glad I use that word because that's the idea is that when I meditate then I can, and when I, and I can act in the day using meditation is a good one because it's, you know, I don't know what's going to be there when I, when I meditate, but I can instead of just being passive, which is the practice I've been doing for a while. Meaning this is something Krishnamurti talks about is not being present with conditions and not reacting Meditation the same way where you're, you know, the pasta is, you know, our experience, being present with our experience and noticing the characteristics of that.

Speaker 1 - 06:52

Anita Nataduka which is very powerful, great thing and is a part of the practice but at the same time I'm finding that I am, I can also have an influence on the quality of my experience through my approach. Meaning look at my attitude and working in a positive manner towards things. So not just passively being in a, you know, negative mind state, a negative mood, but recalling where I would like to be and manifesting that. So back to back the Joe Dispenza thing. And so, and in fact that has been a very valuable part of things too. So it's this skill of. Of. Of knowing when to do that and then knowing when, not when. Basically, there's a saying in recovery, you know, or in spiritual circles about tending to the conditions and letting the results be of God. Right.

Speaker 1 - 08:17

So that is more of what I'm talking about. And that plays out in such deep ways and all kinds of things, habits, any conditioned. Right. So I'm going to try and look at that and explore that a little bit further as I go and see what that happens. I can do that in everything that's in my life. So that's that it.
