

Speaker 1 - 00:00

It.

Speaker 2 - 00:33

I would check with those people, see if they're coming, but there's nine total residents.

Speaker 1 - 00:40

Yeah, we had six last time. Hello. You were with me last time, right? Yeah. My name's Ben. Hi, Ben. I'm Andy.

Speaker 3 - 01:10

Yeah, Andy, nice to see you again.

Speaker 1 - 01:11

Yeah, it's nice and toasted and then I didn't meet you yet. I'm Steve. Steve. Okay. Okay. Hi, Steve. And then were you in the last group?

Speaker 2 - 01:28

I don't know.

Speaker 1 - 01:29

I'm Hillary. Okay, so you're new then. If you don't know, then you probably weren't Hillary.

Speaker 2 - 01:34

I did a meditation the other day, but I don't think it was you.

Speaker 1 - 01:37

Oh, probably me. Hi. Yeah. Surprising. There's a familiar face. Hey. Hey. Hello. Thank you. Hello. Oh, everybody's coming back.

Speaker 2 - 02:08

Shirt. Oh, thank you. I'll have to tell you the story.

Speaker 1 - 02:32

Can you crack that window there?

Speaker 2 - 02:35

I got a scrape. Sir, to you.

Speaker 1 - 02:38

Thank you. No problem. Hopefully we'll get the temperature right. I'm all bundled up in multiple sweaters and jackets. And how's everyone today? Toasty. Okay. So you're. Were you here before? Okay. You were. Okay. Alrighty. Just making sure I meet everybody. Not everybody. I think so right now. So welcome. So I'm just coming off of a retreat for 10 days myself, or meditation retreat. So I make a couple of notes on things that I wanted to. I reconnected with myself that I want to pass on to you guys if I can. So one of them had to do with having a balanced life. Actually, one of the primary thing is having a balanced life and using that as a path. So consider that so not getting too high or too low one way or the other, and trying to not.

Speaker 1 - 04:18

And to not neglect all the parts that you need. Meaning we have to take care of our health, sleep right, eat right, think of our spiritual conditioning, right? Pay attention to our spiritual condition. To not get stuck in any one thing. Meaning so when we're in a bad mental state, then trying to find a way to achieve back. Come back to balance. So that means sometimes talking to spiritual friends, taking a walk in nature, listening to some inspirational talk, there's a whole bunch of ways, reading something, you know, there's different ways. And so in recovery circles, this is. We talk about having a toolkit. You're creating a toolkit. So based on whatever condition, whatever you need right now, you have some choices other than feeling like you have no choice, but, you know, you don't want to feel the way you feel. Right.

Speaker 1 - 05:38

And having this balanced life that you consider because our minds, we complicate everything. We complicate everything, right? We make things that are simple, complicated. We want to know all the instructions. Somebody. I remember one of the kids up the hill last week, first time in the class, they said, is this going to be the same way every time? And I had to laugh. I said, yes, but I. But no. Nothing's ever the same. Everything's always changing. But the thing is, I was pointing to this mind that wants to know. Because when we think we know something, then we tend to ignore it because we already know it. What do I need to know anymore about it? I already know it. So I'm leaning into perceptions, right? So this is how we perceive things.

Speaker 1 - 06:52

This is what our mind does, is we perceive things and we label things. Because this mind has this wanting to know things for the we are. So we label boy, girl, black, white, young, old, rich, poor, pretty, ugly. Just endless labeling. And the reality is that they're just labels. They don't fully describe the truth. Like if you try to explain what love is, you can't really describe it. It's an emotional. It's a feeling, right? All you can do is point towards what it's like. If I'm describing a rose, I could say it's color. It's got thorns, stalks, stems, petals. But all those things are not the rose. Just like you. How you think of you, how you describe yourself is not you. You are indescribable. There's no way we can describe you as a person.

Speaker 1 - 08:22

But we think of ourselves in terms of our memories, our beliefs, our thoughts, our feelings, our opinions about our bodies and all these things, right? This is how we put ourselves together as people. And we're none of those things. We're not our perceptions, we're not our thoughts, we're not our memories. The memories are something that happened yesterday or five minutes ago or 20 years ago. We hold on to those memories as that's who we are, right? That's our story. You're not your story. You know, if we are our stories, then we're doomed because we all screwed up. You can never get away from your story if that's the case. Right? But we're not our stories. It's how we deal and relate to these things right now that gives us freedom or bondage.

Speaker 1 - 09:30

So being aware of these truths can give us a breath of fresh air. Oh, okay, I've got the now. The now is perfect. I'm here in a room with people talking about spiritual matters. That's perfect, right? Where it becomes imperfect, is you want it to be something else. That's where we lose our happiness. We're happy when we're content with the way things are. We're not happy when we're not content with the way things are. We want to feel something different. We want to be some conception of ourselves that's different. We don't like the people we're around, but we want to be around certain people, right? We're having these expectations. I have a thing that I use personally, you can quote me. It's, you know, no expectations, no regrets. I like having that as a mantra.

Speaker 1 - 10:38

And whenever I have an expectation, I get slammed down because I have a regret. I never get what I want. Never. And I have to accept what's given. So it's right. We have to accept. And it's when I struggle and fight against what is given, then that's when I suffer. So we want to pay attention to that. Pay attention to that, right? That's. That's our spiritual side, right? Being aware of that. Because why, if you can remember this and pay attention to this, then you don't get stuck to things that are not you. You don't get stuck to these things. So you're free. There's another word to say it. You're free from those things. So however you label yourself or others is a limitation.

Speaker 1 - 11:45

Another way I like to talk about this is like, I have a belief about myself, so I've created my own house. It's a box. Imagine I have a box. It is my life. And it's mirrors. There's a mirror in front of me, to the side, the back of me, top and the bottom. The mirror is my mind. I create my own world. Everything I see is a reflection of what I put out, right? So if I don't like certain people when I see them in the mirror, I don't like them. Boom, right? What I put out, I get back, right? So meditation is looking what you're putting out. Because your meditation is a mirror of the mind, is pointing back to you and showing you this is reality, right?

Speaker 1 - 12:50

So to not be afraid of that, to get to understand that, to know how we are framing the picture, right? Take responsibility for it, learning how to not just that's not what I want to see and get angry at it, that doesn't do any good. It just makes it worse, right? So coming to some to grow spiritually and to come into understanding as to let go, right? To let go and to accept what's going on and to let go Basically, that's it. You know, accepting what's going on, to know it and then to let it go. And then there's a certain amount of grace that we learn to live life that way. Then we're in no conflict with people. We learn when we're not in conflict with people, then we're contented. When we're contented, we're happy. Want to know how you're happy? That's it.

Speaker 1 - 13:59

Right? But we have to. It's not about happiness because it's more of a process, right? Happiness is a conditioned thing. We're happy when conditions. The conditions for our happiness are met. So. So learning to look within and to look and see the causes and conditions for the way things are. And what can we do? What can we do to see through that, to see through those things? And it's just. It's a simple matter of just closing your eyes and being. Connecting with your body. And that's one thing I want to emphasize. We'll meditate here in a second. Is that whenever you're disturbed, try to stay away from here, because this is just going to keep you in the mousetrap in the hamster wheel. This is going to never cease doing what it's doing, right? So that's okay.

Speaker 1 - 15:04

It's going to do what's going to do. You can't stop it from doing its thing, but you don't. But you can. You have a body here that you can use that when you connect. You can connect with. You can connect with the feeling tone of it, the knowing of that. Knowing the feeling tone. And then you can work with that, right? You can work that. We can't just straighten our minds out that way, right?

Speaker 2 - 15:30

What is a feeling tone?

Speaker 1 - 15:32

So, feeling tone. So that's good. Great question. Okay, so feeling tone. So all right, so why don't we just start meditating and I'll describe that so we'll know how to look at that. So go ahead and let's just close your eyes. Your eyes aren't closed already. And take a. Just take stock here of where you're at mentally. Are you excited or you're depressed or you're frustrated or you're happy or you're joyful or you're peaceful. Whatever it is, just. Just know it. You don't have to figure it out. Just know it. Okay, I got it. And then bring your awareness to your body. Maybe take a couple of deep breaths. This soothing energy coming in and letting go of any stress, just letting go on the way out. That's how we let go.

Speaker 1 - 17:01

So staying with this breath, this feeling tone of the breath, you can feel it either in your diaphragm, you can feel the diaphragm going up and down, or you can feel your lungs expanding and contracting. If you can't feel that, then you can go to where the air comes in and out of your nose. There's cool air coming in, warm air going out. However you feel your breathing. Sometimes if you can't find your breath, take a couple of intentional deep breaths to find it. You're not kind of trying to control it again. It's this knowing quality. Do you know that you're breathing? And the way you know is that you feel it. That is your direct experience. That is something you know. So when you don't know what's going on, you can come to your breath and know that you're breathing, you're alive.

Speaker 1 - 18:56

So you have to be breathing. So this knowing quality, generally feeling is pleasant or unpleasant, or it can be neither pleasant nor unpleasant. So it's neutral. It's in the middle sometimes that can be a little unnerving. So it feels slightly unpleasant. But just this knowing quality, allowing your experience to be there. This open receptivity, allowing for sensations, being aware of perception, you can perceive sensation. This is how you label things, categorize them. This is how you know when you're thinking or that there's pain. You get a feeling for anything that happens to you that you experience physically and mentally. There's some sensation there. Boredom has a feeling, excitement has a feeling, joy as a feeling. Being aware of these sensations, just paying attention to what is going on.

Speaker 1 - 22:11

It's a big part of being mindful, this recognition, what's going on, just allowing this open receptivity it. So to anchor our awareness, usually pick an object which is usually the breath itself. The breath is always available to you. Being aware of the quality of your breathing. Does your breathing feel good? See if you can connect with that aspect of breathing that feels good. Sometimes this involves a deeper listening. Cool air coming in through your nostrils, feels cool, feels good. The rhythm of the breathing can feel good. You can use this technique when the body doesn't feel good. Because if your breath feels good, then your body is going to feel good. Here's experimentation that you can use. This is creative, this meditation. All of it is involved in knowing what's going on and paying attention.

Speaker 1 - 26:32

So if you get pulled off of your object, say the breath, say into some thought world, some planning, whatever it is, coming back when you notice that you're not on your breathing, whatever the object is, just bow to whatever distracted you. Take a note of it. You're collecting data and come back to breathing again. It nodding off. Try to bring more interest into your awareness. Paying attention. Investigation generates energy. You could also think of something like bright or light. Or you can intentionally bring something to mind that interests you like your dog. Notice the energy that it brings. Come back to your breath and intentionally breathe in deeper. That brings in more energy. You have too much energy and you want to go the other way. Remember this balance. So you want to lower the energy. So think calming.

Speaker 1 - 29:47

Feel a lot of your energies and thinking. Then maybe move your awareness down to your feet, away from your head. Meditation is a skill. So whatever you are experiencing is what you pay attention to and use it. This is your direct experience. It's not a concept, it's not a belief. It's direct knowing it connect with this knower that knows what's going on. It is not the thought, it's not the feeling, it's not the emotion. It's what knows these things. Try to not just throw away the information that you got in the meditation. Try to bring it into your present. That way it builds continuity. So the next time you meditate, you remember where you left off. And that way you can connect the dots and you can continually experiment and improve and play around with this. So maybe you breathed in a certain way.

Speaker 1 - 35:56

It would work for a little bit. Then it didn't work here. Maybe you'll try, okay, you'll try something a little bit different this next time. That way you become your own teacher. Only you know what's going on inside of you, right? Your propensities in the way you approach things. So these things will have to be revealed to you. They may be hidden from you right now. One of the reasons why I go on more extended retirement treat, usually I hit that limit. You know, there's some view of myself that I'm unaware of and I'm meditating. Then, then I hit that limit and it's like, oh shoot, okay, that thing came up again. I keep on forgetting it.

Speaker 1 - 36:51

And then, you know, and then I'm reminded, like I have this tension in my head that I deal with almost every retreat and I've gotten used to be debilitating and now it's barely there, but it's still there just a little bit. But I work on it. And you know, we all have our dark stuff that we have to work on. That's why we go to Therapy and do other kinds of things. Right? We got to work on these things, right. Some things can just go away and some things can. They. They work on us forever. Like, for instance, if you're. I have a lot of pain. I've had a lot of pain in my history. So back pain, knee pain, various head pain. You know, this thing with the head pain. Right. Thing. So I have pain.

Speaker 1 - 37:40

So I have to learn to work with pain. That's. I can't get around it, right? So. And learning how to deal with that, how to approach it mentally and how to approach it is a big deal, right? It's a big deal with it. And I have to. So that's been one of my greatest teachers. So if you're. Say you're angry, you're angry person. You identify with being angry. You're not angry, but you identify. You have a lot of anger that comes up. Well, that's your teacher, right? So your higher power is saying, pay attention to this anger. Get to know it, get to understand it. You're not trying to push it away. You're trying to understand. Everything here is about understanding, not about pushing things away and just changing things. Right.

Speaker 1 - 38:43

You're here to understand the conditions, the causes and conditions for things happening so that you can deal with them appropriately. And it's not a simple do. And it happens, right? Because we're more complicated than that. Circumstances are more complicated. But if you're open to that and receptive to that, then you're not caught up in it. You're not identifying with everything as a problem. Then your approach is a little bit different. Oh, it's just something I got to deal with. You deal with it. When things come up, you just learn to deal with it. So in AA speak, they talk about, this is how we get intuitive and intuitive inclination to dealing with things. Right. So we want to be able to learn to allow this wisdom to grow. Generally, there's three aspects to this. In Buddhism, it's called sila, samadhi and prana.

Speaker 1 - 40:05

So Silas is basically looking at your behaviors. So are you lying, cheating, stealing, blah, blah, blah. If you're expecting to be peaceful and you're lying, cheating, and stealing, then you're really deluded, right? That that's going to bring you any kind of peace. So you have to know how you're behaving. Number one, then samadhi is the meditation part, the inner getting to know your inside and understanding internally. And then that brings about with these two, then that's what Brings wisdom. So there's all three of these aspects to our practice that we're going to work on. Meditation is just part of it because life happens in life. So you take this meditation and when you learn patience in your meditation, you learn patience and compassion outside to. Because if you could see it in yourself. Right. Then you're less likely to accuse other people. Right.

Speaker 1 - 41:23

There's understanding there. When you know yourself, then you know others. Right? Yeah. Go ahead, Sila. S I L a Sila is the practice of understanding. That's precepts. Precepts. Samadhi is meditation. Yeah. Panya P A N N A. That's wisdom. Yeah. So samadhi is concentration, tranquil. There's two branches to it. There's this tranquility and then there's insight. So you need both of them too. So you're working on. It's like the. See that post on the. In the ceiling here, how the other posts are going to it. So mindfulness is kind of like the structure that holds it all up. So mindfulness is the reason why we're talking about mindfulness. In order for you to see any of this, you have to be mindful of it. If you're not aware, then you can't see anything. You can't do anything about something you can't see.

Speaker 1 - 42:47

But once you see it, then there's a responsibility to deal with it, to understand it, and to know what tool to bring out whatever it is. Right. So mindfulness is like the brakes. It puts the brakes on what's going on. Right. So that you can deal with it. Any questions about. Have you guys practiced other than here with me, or is this you finding any of this difficult or. No, I mean, just, you know, what.

Speaker 3 - 43:39

You're saying makes a lot of sense. You know, just being able to like one thing. So like one thing I struggle with is anxiety. Right.

Speaker 1 - 43:47

And.

Speaker 3 - 43:47

And I've tried to say, oh no, I'm like, I'm not feeling anxious. I don't want to feel anxious. But kind of the takeaway I'm getting from today is if you kind of shine a light on that, bring awareness to that and recognize that it is a feeling, it's there, it's real.

Speaker 1 - 44:02

Yep.

Speaker 3 - 44:03

That's how you're able to actually start working toward dealing with it.

Speaker 1 - 44:07

Yeah. Did I say it here? In this group, let your resist persists. Yeah, yeah.

Speaker 3 - 44:12

Last time.

Speaker 1 - 44:13

Right. So, yeah. So when you resist something, this actually comes from when I had my panic, anxiety attacks. I don't know if I've talked to you about that? Well, in sobriety I ended up with panic syndrome where I was having panic. That lasted for two months. It lasted. And it's one of these things where actually I was feeling good. It was actually started at a meditation retreat. I was feeling good and I had the thought in my head, you're high. And that freaked me out. And then all of a sudden I started thinking, oh, my ex wife is going to have to take care of me the rest of my life. I'm not going to be able to take care of myself. I just had all these racing thoughts that just. I couldn't stop, right? Oh, it snowballed. Yeah.

Speaker 2 - 45:09

Because you were saying, this reminds me.

Speaker 1 - 45:11

It was a simple thought of me thinking I was high. Then all of a sudden I had wrong understanding, right. So what happened was, is I was experiencing something and I didn't understand what I was experiencing, which is all the time, right. I didn't know it was going on. It's like all the time, right. We think we know what's going on and we react based on that. This is a situation where I didn't know what was going on. And the people. I didn't have anybody around me that knew what was going on, so they couldn't help me. So anyway, what I ended up doing is going. And, and I went to a psychiatrist. I got Valium, I got involved with this awakening joy course. I connected with my sponsor, I went on nature walks. I mean, these tools I was telling you about, right?

Speaker 1 - 46:14

And yeah, it lasted for two months. And then eventually I. When you're, when you're aware of things like I was trying to describe a little bit like anger has. You can almost see anger. You could feel it, you could touch it, you could hear it. There's a kind of a feeling tone to some of these emotions, right? These things and this panic. And I can't really describe if I had some recent panic. I can refer to it, but I could almost see it, touch it, feel it and know when it was going to arise, right? When it was going to arise. And I. As soon as I looked at it just disappeared. That's how it went away. So this recognition of this. So when we buy into a thought, when we identify with things, it's almost too late, right?

Speaker 1 - 47:22

When the recognition happens that we could do something about it. And that's what this meditation is all about, Recognizing what's going on and saying, oh, this is anxiety. Oh, I'm used to anxiety. I get anxiety all the time. So you relax you see what I'm saying? You know it now, right? So then you relax. Like that panic. That panic was there. It's no big deal. I've seen it before. It's been there, done that. You relax and you let go of it. So in therapy, they have you bring things up purposely so that you can experience it and then it passes away. So it's no longer the big bad wolf anymore, right? It's the same exact thing were just talking about with the anxiety and the panic. It's like, oh, this is normal, right? This is what fear feels like.

Speaker 1 - 48:24

So I go through and feel, experience fear. I don't panic about it anymore. I said, oh, this is fear because I have heart problem. So I was worried to have a heart attack, right? That's right. You're tight. Another tightness. There's a whole bunch of stuff that goes on with it, right? You know it, right? So go to the body and recognize that. Try not to get into the thinking part of it because that's trouble. You're never going to solve that problem. But if you go to the body and you could say, oh, I know that feeling, okay, I'm going to relax around that feeling. You're not going to make it worse, right? Usually. Go ahead.

Speaker 2 - 49:13

The very thing that maybe were afraid of looking at and so we suppressed and drank. When you actually recognize what it is, talk about it. Their phoenix isn't instances. You're taking away the power by naming it.

Speaker 1 - 49:28

That's right.

Speaker 2 - 49:29

Exposing it and realizing that the fact it probably wasn't worth running from.

Speaker 1 - 49:34

That's right. You make a big deal out of little things, right? A mountain of a molehill, right? Or I mean, it can be. But the reason why it is a big bad wolf is because you gave it all that power, right? You gave its power. So you can use that. You don't have to buy into the story, but that's something that's experiential. I can tell you this, but you have to know it, right? You know it. And if you can remember this, that's great. If it comes up in your meditation, say, oh, Andy told me about this. I'm going to be with it, blah, blah. But then you do it and then that's how you get to be experienced with it. So know it and just let it be. Right? Know it. Just know it and let it be.

Speaker 1 - 50:42

Is 99% of what's going on. Pain. Nothing I could do with pain. So a lot of times what happened with pain is the mind clamps down on the pain. Kind of like, oh, I'm going to protect myself from pain. And then guess what, you've just amplified the pain. So if you can learn to relax and try to heal and be and allow it to do its thing without fighting it, then a lot of times I would have to say 80 to 90% of my pain is reduced just because I don't feed it. I have pain all the time. I've had pain in my knees right now I don't even worry about it, you know, because it's coming and going. It's doing its thing now. I don't have to. I don't try. There's in Native American spirituality, there's this idea of two wolves.

Speaker 1 - 51:45

So which wolf are you going to feed? Are you going to feed your disease? The bad wolf, the angry wolf, the destructive wolf, the negative wolf? Or are you going to feed the good natured? Loving, purring, loving? Right. So we have to. So that the idea is that we try to choose the path of peace. Choose, you know, try to choose things. And a lot of times we, you know, there's other phrases that comes up that can use, like surrender to win. I always love that. For me, letting go is winning. It's not losing. Knowing when to surrender is winning. You know, you're getting beaten down and then when you let go, then you won. You're no longer suffering anymore. It's when you fight, that's when the suffering's happening. And when you think about it, that's when their suffering is happening. Right?

Speaker 1 - 52:57

So you can perfectly deal with afflictive things through meditation by meditating for a few minutes, getting as peaceful and as calm as you can, and then purposely bringing up the thing that's agitating you. Not thinking about it, just the idea of it. So like my husband or my girlfriend, right, don't have to go into the story, you just drop a little hint of it into your meditation. So for instance, I don't want to go political. That's the wrong way to go. But say your parents are a source of agitation for you, right? You're having some concern or upset at your parents. Just bringing up as an example, I'm not intending to bring up anything. So you meditate, get as calm as you can, peaceful as you calm, so you're alert and aware. And then say, parents don't.

Speaker 1 - 54:07

Nothing else that's going to conjure up emotions and different things, right? So you just planted a little seed. Then guess what? Now you get to feel it. Now you get to be in the body with it. So you see, I'm saying this is how you get to process it and to deal with it in the body. And you know that, okay? When I'm upset about this thing, then my stomach churns and my heart tightens and my. You know what? You know, whatever. You get to know it on a physical level, and then that's a way for you to. Another way to deal with and process things. Okay? Not up here. Not up here. Because this thing is going to forever trick you. Forever. So you want to be in control of the mind, not let the mind control you.

Speaker 1 - 55:05

The mind is going to do what it's supposed to do. It does all of the calculations and logic and philosophy and concepts and it's doing all that stuff. But the world is not concepts and philosophy. Life is right here in front of us. Right back to what I was talking about, the rose. You can describe the rose, but it's not the rose. It just points to the rose. So having this understanding is. Can bring you peace of mind. When we understand things the way they are, if you know Hercules is going to beat you down, you're going to go in the ring with them. No. Right. So you bypassed the whole issue through wisdom. We're all going to get sick, we're all going to age, we're all going to die. Everybody we know that's going to happen to.

Speaker 1 - 56:23

So if we can bring that to mind. Like my mom died last year, right. I think I've been thinking about her dying for the previous 10 years. I have been thinking about it. Not incessantly, just. I just. Okay. It's a picture of her said, okay, she's going to be gone soon. She's going to be gone. I was preparing myself for it. So when she died, I was prepared. Right? So there's certain recollections, things we should recollect that we should bring up intentionally so that we remember them. Just like our recovery. You know, the AA is going to teach you, or aa, if you go to aa, a report you do. But you know, there's certain things that you learn there, right? Those things just like here you're in recovery center, they're teaching you things, right?

Speaker 1 - 57:18

So you're learning so that you can pay attention when you leave here to be aware of those things when you're out in the real world, right?

Speaker 3 - 57:26

Yeah. One of the coolest things about, like you mentioned surrender earlier.

Speaker 1 - 57:30

Yes, that's one of the things I learned. Well, I tried to commit suicide. So for me, that's ultimate surrender, right? So that's where I got it. I didn't get it from aa. I got it from what I did. Surrender is waiting for the paramedics to come and save you. Right? Right. But I'm saying that's ultimate when you get. Give up on yourself, right. That you know that surrender. So no, but that's right. So I talked about surrender all the time. Yeah.

Speaker 2 - 58:10

That this moment will pass. When we're studying suicide ideation, that moment, that feeling will always pass. So to just wait it out and recognize that we're going to have another moment for joy or another moment when we choose to remember this accomplishment of a peaceful state of mind, that can happen through choice, but also just naturally that moment will pass and putting it out so that we don't respond or react to that impulse. And because once that trigger's pulled, it's over.

Speaker 1 - 58:42

You know, that's right. That's what I'm saying. Once you. Once you will pass. You know, that's right.

Speaker 2 - 58:47

To know that in this type of.

Speaker 1 - 58:49

That's the same thing here. So one of the things in meditation is being aware of things changing. So when you're sitting here watching your breath, when you start, your breath is tight. Once you pay attention to it starts relaxing and changing. Anita, Things are changing all the times. Our brains, Anita, means impermanence. Impermanence, Things are changing. That's another way for saying it. Things are always changing. Nothing lasts. That's why I mentioned old age, sickness and death. We're here tomorrow, we're not. That's right. We're here today, we're gone tomorrow. This is the way of everything. Everything. You see, the same thing is going to happen. Everything. So when we know that's the way things are. When I used to get something new, right. It would invariably get scratched or broken or whatever. So there's another saying, it's already broken.

Speaker 1 - 59:59

So when I get something and somebody scratches my car, it's already broken. Right. You see, I'm saying then that way I'm not so attached and upset and fuming and wanting to kill somebody over my car getting scratched. Just a car. It's not the end of the world. But we treat it like it's the end of the world. We're willing to go to war over things like that, over some slight, some belief. So it's when we personalize tick things personally that fights and wars happen. So this is all the same. This is a healing for the world. So we learn to heal the world by healing ourselves. So when we heal ourselves, then we relate to the world differently. Thank you for that. Okay, I'll sign your. Thank you for being here.

Speaker 3 - 01:01:11

Thank you for being here as well.

Speaker 1 - 01:01:13

You're welcome.

Speaker 2 - 01:01:24
